INTEREST KEEN AMONG WOMEN IN ALL WALKS OF LIFE, AS THE COURIER COOKING SCHOOL SESSIONS NEAR

Eager for Four Sessions, and Glimpse of Large Aggregation of Valuable Gifts—Banner Attendance Looked For Each of Four Evenings

LECTURER-DEMONSTRATOR ARRIVES

MISS GRACE BURROUGHS

of the DeBoth organization, who arrived in Bristol today. Miss Burroughs will be the lecturer-demonstrator of the Courier's Cooking and Home-Makers' School to be conducted in St. James's Parish Building, November 10th, 11th, 12th and 13th.

Tomorrow night is the night!

The time is 7.45.

The place is St. James's Parish Building, Wood and Walnut streets.

The admission is absolutely free.

The Courier's Cooking and Home-Makers' School will then get under way and if indications at this time are any criterion, this year's school is going to be even a greater success than the one of last year.

Women in all walks of life are discussing the school and are planning to attend, not only one session but every one of the four sessions which will be given at the same place and the same hour on each of the three successive evenings.

"Tell me the hour your cooking school sessions will be given," writes a woman reader of the Courier from Bristol Township. "I want to attend every session." This is just one instance indicative of the interest which the school this year is creating.

Not only the women of Bristol and lower Bucks county are interested, but the progressive merchants of this section as well. These merchants are co-operating so splendidly with the Courier in giving equal credit with the Courier.

Just read over the list of valuable gifts which are to be given away and read over the list of merchants aiding this worthwhile endeavor.

Read the extensive advertising sections of the Courier all this week and patronize these merchants and buy the products advertised as a measure of return to those merchants who are bending every effort to make the school a record breaker.

It is not often that a school such as this is staged in a town the size of Bristol. In fact it may never have been done before, as far as records show. Last year's effort was a test and the initial effort went over so big that the second venture was taken.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock some of the local merchants who have joined hands with the Courier are going to stage an impromptu parade of their delivery trucks. The line will be headed by the music wagon of the General Baking Company.

On Friday evening, the concluding night of the school, Mrs. Horace H. Burton, of Edgely, will be the hostess at this affair.

Business and Trade may follow the flag but right behind the flag and sometimes abreast of it is the cook. In other words about the first thing one action brings to another is its food secrets and discoveries. Following this idea a little further and we see that the cook of today is not confined to the dishes of any one land but has at her command the best of the entire civilized world.

When Miss Grace Burroughs of the famous DeBoth Home Making School opens her course of instruction and lectures in Bristol tomorrow night at 7.45 under the auspices of the Courier she brings with her knowledge of the culinary arts of all climes and countries. "Cooking science knows no language," she says. "In other words biscuits are biscuits whether made in China, France, America or America." The French chef, the Italian maestro of cooking, the German haus frau secure results from mixing certain ingredients and cooking them in a certain way.

The DeBoth Schools have made a world study of the culinary art. Their lecturers can rival the best of cooks in any land in creating the dishes that are world famed for their origin. The rules of cooking are basic, and the women in America whose husband originated in some far away land can set before him the dish he most loves, cooked as well or better than he ever knew it in his early home.

No woman need be limited in her cookery. If a dish is so complicated the average American woman cannot understand how to prepare it, then there are countless substitutes that are as delicious to taste and appearance. Complications in cookery add to the labor and not to the result, she teaches.

Many cook books fall into the error of supposing the reader knows more than he or she does and fails to give instruction in mixing, length of cooking needed, type of utensils to be used and other matters. Yet it is

JOAN LOWELL CLIMBS ROPE ON SHIP'S SIDE AS SEA SURGES ABOUT; LIFE-BOAT BOUNCED ABOUT WAVES OF GREAT PROPORTIONS LIKE TINY CORK

Trawler's Captain and Crew Have Nothing But Praise for Coast Guard Service—Call for Help Always Answered —Bucks County Authoress Enjoys the Thrills

Joan Lowell, brilliant young authoress of "Cradle of the Deep," and the only woman ever permitted to help chase run-runners in a Coast Guard craft, today continues her thrilling story of dangerous days at sea. This is the sixth of her series of stories relating her thrills and experiences. Saturday Miss Lowell told of the SOS from the stricken trawler "Boston College," off the Grand Banks.

By Joan Lowell

BOSTON, Nov. 9.—(INS)—Daylight brought no surcease from the heavy sea and wind. Before eight bells struck, we sighted the trawler Boston College, rolling in the trough of the seas ahead.

Her hull of iron was red with rust, and at times as she tossed on a swell, the red of her keel was visible. She was drifting in the seaway—and it took some time for us to overtake her and come alongside.

Hawyers were made ready on deck. It on the Mojave—the shoulder line firing gun loaded, the crew standing by. . . . Sometime during the night, the fisherman on the trawler had broken out a "bride" or towing chain for the hawser to be made fast to.

Once more the common law of humanity on the sea prevailed—this time in silence. Not a word was spoken or called by any of the crew on the trawler—they just stood by to catch the line. If anything, there was a faint smile of relief on the fisherman-skipper's face.

With expert aim, the line was shot to the Boston College and received safely. Slowly the Mojave steamed ahead until the tow line was taut—and then put her strength to pulling the iron trawler two hundred and thirty miles to Boston Harbor through a rough sea.

Again I was permitted to go with the boarding party, but this time it was more difficult, for a swell was running, and the lifeboat bounced on the waves like a cork. From our small boat we hailed the captain on the Boston College and asked for a Jacob's ladder to be put over the side.

"You'll have to haul yourselves up by a rope," he called. "We haven't got a ladder."

One husky fisherman threw us a halyard rope, and it was every man for himself—and just about to go up hand over hand when a wave struck the lifeboat athwartships and jerked me off my feet.

I felt like the proverbial fly being shot off a rubber band. How I managed aged to get up is still a mystery. When I finally landed on the deck in the midst of fish nets, floats and ropes, I regained my sea legs.

"Will you take a picture of us?" piped up the spokesman for the fishermen. "Mermaids are scarce in this here ocean!"

We lined them up and obliged them. "These pictures will give folks ashore an idea of how a fish comes to be in a can in their grocery store," he said, and a 75-pound cod was placed in my hand as Exhibit A.

The captain gave us his story. During the storm, the crank case of his propeller cracked—crippling his engine—He had over a thousand dollars' worth of fish in the hold packed in ice—just part of their regular catch, and 10 thousand dollars' worth of damage to his ship.

"What do you think of the Coast Guard service?" I asked.

"Best thing in the world for us fellows—every time we get in trouble we know they will pull us out. . . . In the old days, when a fisherman got

MRS. HETHERINGTON DIES IN HER 99TH YEAR

Deceased Made Her Home in Bristol for Past 84 Years

SIX CHILDREN SURVIVE

Mrs. Ann Hetherington died at her home, 312 Wood street, yesterday morning in her 99th year.

It is believed that Mrs. Hetherington was one of the oldest if not the oldest resident in Bucks County.

The deceased was a native of Ireland, having been born at Inniskillen, County Fermanagh, January 26, 1833. When quite young she came to Canada with her parents and then later to the United States. She resided in Bristol for the past 84 years.

This highly-esteemed woman was the mother of ten children, six of whom are still living. She is also survived by six grandchildren and 11 great grandchildren.

Mrs. Hetherington had remarkable health during her lifetime and was never known to have had a serious illness. Even at her advanced age she was able to walk about her room up until a week ago and sat up in bed on Wednesday.

Mrs. Hetherington was interested in community affairs and during her younger life she took an active part in the work of the Bristol Presbyterian Church. Her disposition was pleasant and her acts were kindly and charitable.

She was the mother of the Rev. Robert Hetherington, pastor of the Epworth Methodist Church, 56th and Race streets, Philadelphia.

Children surviving are Mrs. Frank Stradling, Burlingame, California; Mrs. Emma Schiesser, the Rev. Robert Hetherington, and George Hetherington, Philadelphia; the Misses Anna and Bertha V. Hetherington, Bristol.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock from the late residence of the deceased with the Rev. S. Brooks Knowlton, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiating. Interment in Bristol Cemetery.

Missing Pans Added To Boys' Enjoyment

(By "The Stroller")

To the boys in the Herman, Littleton and McBride families, of Taft street, this cold, windy weather is a real "blow." It rather brings to an end their popular summer and fall pastime—that of congregating in their dugout located opposite the Littleton home.

The lads had managed the erection of a coal-burning grate, and the chimney was set up in the best of style. Seats were arranged in alcoves, and over all was a tin roof, sturdily built. The roof was camouflaged on the exterior by a covering of sod and dirt. The dug-out, hidden by shrubbery, has been a favorite meeting place on many a day.

The numerous canine friends were admitted; and they shared the boys' meals. The mothers frequently missed coffee pots and pans.

RIOTING NEAR PEIPING

With one week remaining before the date set by the League of Nations Council for evacuation of Japanese troops and the peaceful settlement of the Manchurian crisis, Sino-Japanese attention was seriously aggravated today by bloody rioting in Tsentsin, the gateway to Peiping.

Japanese officials characterized the rioting as the Chinese rebellion while the Chinese authorities alleged the rioters were subsidized by Japanese funds.

On the Northern Manchurian front, according to dispatches received, Chinese and Japanese troops went into action again at the Noni River bridge head, the Chinese having 8,300 men in the field against 10,000 Japanese. The Japanese war office announced it had obtained confessions from two captured officers of General Ma Chang-shan's army that the Chinese troops were being assisted by 690 Russian soldiers and that 100 Russian cavalrymen were directing the defense at Tsitsihar.

SEIZE BEER IN RAID AT TORRESDALE MANOR

Bungalow of John McLaren is Paid Unexpected Visit by Officers

McLAREN UNDER BAIL

TORRESDALE MANOR, Nov. 9.—State Troopers, county detective and constables swooped down on the bungalow of John McLaren, late Saturday night, and caught a dozen patrons of the place seated at tables drinking beer.

The alleged proprietor, John McLaren, was taken into custody and given a hearing before Justice Lynn in the Bristol Municipal Building, shortly before midnight. He was held in $500 bail to await the analysis of the contents of a half-barrel of beer seized by the raiders.

The raid was made after complaints had been made to the county authorities and State troopers. Neighbors, it is said, complained about the conduct of those who frequented the house.

When the officers entered the McLaren premises a dozen men and women were found seated at tables drinking beer. They were placed under arrest.

The raiders confiscated the beer, coils and other equipment.

STATE TROOPERS ARE TRANSFERRED; PROMOTIONS MADE

Corporal William Francis is Promoted to Rank of Sergeant

STEWART IS CORPORAL

Corporal Dean is Transferred From Morrisville To Reading

An order was received at the Doylestown sub-station of the State Police Saturday directing the transfer of Sergeant William Francis, whose promotion in rank was announced to the State Police Training School at Hershey, Pa., to which he has been assigned as instructor.

Although no official announcement accompanied the transfer, it is known that the new station to which Sergeant Francis has been assigned is a reward for meritorious duty and service rendered while in charge of the Doylestown sub-station during the past year and eleven months.

Orders were also received at the Morrisville sub-station which transfer Corporal Dean to Reading and advances Trooper Stewart to the rank of Corporal.

Corporal Dean is another State Trooper who did great work in Bucks county and who was fearless in the discharge of his duties.

Trooper Stewart, while not having been stationed in Doylestown as long as the others, has proven his ability as an officer and has won many friends because of his fairness and fearlessness.

Trooper Christ remains at Morrisville.

Sergeant Francis' place will be taken by one of the most efficient officers of the Pennsylvania State Police force, Sergeant Reese Davis, an overseas veteran of the World war, who has been an instructor in the State Police Training School at Hershey for some time.

The same officers who have been at the Doylestown sub-station under the command of Sergeant Francis will remain under Sergeant Davis, they include Troopers Greblunas and Toy.

Sergeant Davis is a World War veteran. He served in France with the 77th Field Artillery of the Fourth Division, the same outfit in which Deputy Register of Wills Harry S. Hoelsack saw active service at the front.

Records show that during the time Sergeant Francis was in charge of the Doylestown sub-station of State Police, the apprehension of criminals reached a high mark in Bucks county. Fearless in the line of duty, efficient in his paper work in connection with the duties of commanding officer of a sub-station, Sergeant Francis' transfer from Doylestown is much regretted by his hundreds of friends.

"In all my experience as an officer in the State Police, I have never found county and local authorities so willing to co-operate at all times as they have been in Bucks county," Sergeant Francis said this morning.

Commenting on the transfer of Sergeant Francis in Bucks County, District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn said: "During the service of Sergeant William Francis in Bucks County, many important cases have been investigated carefully and intelligently. Sergeant Francis has a thorough knowledge of police work and has the loyal support of the officers working with him. His relations with the District Attorney's office have always been most pleasant and the office wishes him continued success in his work."

UPWARD!

Economists who have been saying that business would be definitely on the upturn for several months before the new trend was recognized by the public have based this prediction on the history of all previous solstices in business.

Indications are that the upward trend has set in in many lines, which in turn will pass increased prosperity on to other businesses and industries. So quietly has the face-about been made, however, that many persons are not yet conscious of the betterment.

Bank failures are steadily declining, indicating a more healthy condition of the financial institutions which are the nerve center of all commercial and industrial activities. The weak have about been eliminated and those that survive are the stronger for it. A continued diminution in bank closings will be a powerful factor in the restoration of confidence.

Industrial operations in many lines are showing gains in employment and output for the first time in two years. This is a trend that is bound to gain in momentum. Stocks of manufacturers of all kinds are at the lowest level in 15 years or longer and will not long remain at this abnormal ebb.

Readjustment and liquidation is nearing completion if that point has not already been touched. The worst is over. The upward swing is under way.

OBSTACLES

The director of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce who says that "hit and run" motorists should be fired on by officers who may be present at the scene of accidents and these officers should shoot to kill, seems to a sure that officers are likely to be present, which in most cases would do violence to fact.

That the "hit and run" driver would receive not more than his just deserts were he shot and killed might be true, but in order to stop the practice some effective means of bringing such offenders to book other than relying on an officer being present and accurate in his aim needs be devised. A driver who would run after hitting usually is of the class likely to be circumspect when in the presence of an officer, but not averse to trampling on the rights of others when he feels that he has a chance to get away with it.

It is a difficult matter to trace the perpetrator of a "hit and run" crime. The offender has at his command the means of getting away speedily. Unless someone witnesses the accident and secures the number of the car the chances of detection are slight. Yet there is more likelihood of capturing the cowardly driver in this way than in the chance that an officer will be present.

I'LL HOLD HIM AND YOU SPANK HIM

The CZARINA'S RUBIES

—by Sidney Warwick

READ THIS FIRST

Frank Severn has been kidnapped from his country home, Beggar's Court, apparently by persons trying to steal the fabulous and sinister Czarina Rubies. Severn's friend, Jim Wynter, enlists the help of Bill Grayson, a lawyer, and they search the grounds, discovering a secret stairway and a locked door in the ruins of an ancient chapel. While they plan to force the door, a wall collapses, burying it under tons of masonry. They suspect Martin, a servant of Severn's, of dynamiting the wall. They begin to doubt also the sincerity of Sant, Severn's attorney.

In a village nearby they meet an ex-convict, Ilsham, who goes on crutches. Also they encounter a mysterious Dr. Martell, whose presence Martin, the servant, tries for some reason to conceal. Grayson's wife and Katharine Faring, to whom the rubies rightfully belong by inheritance from her Russian grandfather, return to London while the two men plan to search Beggar's Court again at night. Wynter discovers Ilsham, his crutches laid aside, examining a motor boat in a boathouse. Martin and a thug named Frome try to shoot Wynter, who outwits and captures them.

NOW GO ON

CHAPTER XXXVII

Sant had not recognized Jim Wynter as he came running up until the latter's voice reached him through the scarcely relieved darkness. It was plain that the sight of Jim was a surprise to the startled, excited man.

At first he was too winded to speak. It was not often that Sant had moved so quickly and this big man was hopelessly out of condition.

"You here, Wynter? Bill I thought you were in London!" broke from him breathlessly. "But that sudden white glare I saw from the house just now, almost like an explosion—"

Sant's startled questioning voice snapped off, as he became suddenly aware of that second figure a few yards away, vaguely outlined in the shadowy starlight dusk.

"Who's this?" Sant seemed to remember for the first time the electric torch that he had snatched up as he ran out of the house. He dragged it from his pocket, swung its light round on to the man from the Cross Keys Inn.

SHAKEN

The latter was dragging himself unsteadily to his feet. In the light of the lamp the swarthy face showed how that blow had rattled him; he looked dazed and shaken. The sudden eyes as they glanced toward Jim Wynter were full of hatred, a venomous hatred mingled with something like fear.

"Frome!" cried Sant. He seemed in a queer, nervously excited mood and his voice was shrill, unlike itself. He stared at the man and from him to Jim Wynter. "Good Lord! What does all this mean?"

Frome, Jim remembered that, when looking up the telephone number of the inn, the name of its proprietor had been given—Frome. So this amateur gunman was the landlord of the Cross Keys.

"Oh, Frome and I had a little disagreement," he said with a shrug. "You're in authority at Beggar's Court until Severn says you approve of Martin and this friend of his roaming these grounds and shooting on sight at anyone they chance to see? Frome, with the excellent Martin aiding and abetting, twice deliberately tried to pot me tonight."

"I may have fired, but I had no intention of hitting you, sir," broke in Frome sullenly.

"As for Martin, he's in the estuary," went on Jim coolly, ignoring the interruption—"that's his bludge," as a voice came through the "jars."

Sant swung the electric torch round on to the man from Cross Keys Inn.

ness calling Sant's name appealingly. "An unpleasant experience, of course, but perhaps all for his son's good. He's in no danger; I satisfied myself of that—but I suppose we shall have to lend him a hand."

He took the pocket lamp from the startled, bewildered Sant and flashed its light downward by the side of the boathouse. Martin, white-faced and desperate eyed, was holding on desperately to the post by the landing steps.

"Good heavens, Wynter, what's happened?" broke from Sant.

"Oh, I didn't chuck him in. It was his own guilty conscience," retorted Jim unsympathetically, as he strode forward to help his unwearying enemy to regain firm ground.

By this time Bill Grayson, guided by the moving gleam, had come running up. Jim met his startled glance with a short laugh.

"You've just missed an orgy of excitement, Bill," he explained. He took the automatic with its silencer from his pocket. "See this, Sant? Exhibit A. The lethal weapon—that's the right phrase, isn't it—with which Frome and Martin made two attempts to shoot me tonight."

EXCUSES

"If you'll only listen I can explain it all, sir," out in Martin desperately, his teeth chattering as he spoke, the water dripping forlornly from his drenched garments.

"Of course we never meant to shoot Mr. Wynter; stands to reason we didn't," added Frome glibly, a scowling but cowed figure.

Wynter laughed.

"The point is," he remarked gently, "whether the magistrates will believe your story when you are charged with attempted murder."

"They attempted to pot you, Jim?" cried Bill Grayson, trying to get the hang of a bewildering situation.

"Oh, but I can't believe that, Wynter," broke out Sant's startled voice.

"Can't you, Sant?" retorted Jim dryly. "Shall I show you two bullet holes in the boathouse? I was making a good target against the white paint when the first bullet came plow within two inches of me. Scared me blue, I can tell you."

"Let me explain," cried Martin shrilly, his face was a white twitching mask of fear. "It was all a terrible mistake. We had no idea it was Mr. Wynter—and in any case Frome purposely fired wide."

"That's true enough," said Frome sullenly. "There have been folks making suspiciously free of these grounds o' nights, worrying Martin still more now that he's the only man in the house, now that Creyke's—disappeared. So we decided to keep watch and scare them off, whoever they were. I never recognized this gentleman in the dark—is it likely I should have fired if we had? I can only say I'm very sorry."

Frome didn't look sorry. He only looked afraid of possible awkward consequences to himself—and full of a malignant hatred toward the man he had failed to harm.

REMEMBRANCE

For Jim Wynter the voice of Frome had confirmed that suspicion that had been in his mind from the moment of seeing Martell's shadow on the ceiling of that upper room at the Cross Keys Inn. Frome's voice was that voice he had heard at Monksilver on the night of Creyke's death, that of the unseen man he had fought with on those dark stairs.

For some reason they had spared him that night at Monksilver, when he had been at the mercy of the men who had murdered Creyke and kidnapped Severn; was it that they thought him more dangerous now, that this associate of Martell's had snatched at the sudden chance of making an end of him?

"You remember I told you of figures I'd seen moving in the grounds after dark, Mr. Sant, sir?" went on Martin, abject in his whining self-justification. "I know we ought to have asked your permission before we set about scaring them off. I'm very sorry, sir. But, of course, if we'd as much as dreamed it was Mr. Wynter—but I'd heard him myself saying he was going up to London from here this afternoon."

Sant broke out explosively:

"Of course you're sorry now you've landed yourself in this mess! You knew better than to ask my permission for something I would never have tolerated," he cried, his face furious with anger. "Well, after this I've no further use for you, my man. You'll clear out from here first thing tomorrow. That's what your damned tomfoolery's done for you, Martin!"

"I'm very sorry, sir—" began Martin again.

"Shut up! I've said all I have to say to you," snapped Sant.

disabled, before the Coast Guard had a big fleet on duty—we might never be heard of—or a piece of wreckage of us washed ashore to tell what became of us. It's easy on the womenfolk at home, too—knowing we got the protection of the cutters—because when our SOS is reported they know they ain't going to be widows—no, sir—not while the government has ships standing by under power to help."

"Captain, will you do me a favor?" I asked.

"Sure—I'll give you this ship if you want it—what is it?"

"Well, I made a bet with one of the officers on the Mojave that I would bring back a fresh fish for the crew in the wardroom—and he bet me I couldn't."

I climbed down the hatch, clutching at the iron ladder which was slippery with fish scales and self-preservation made me spear a fish a second and load a lobster basket with them—chickens, halibut, haddock and cod—dozens of them, fishes for all the crew of eighty and officers on the Mojave.

When I emerged from that hold covered with slime, salt and fish scales in my hair, eyes, feet and hands, I was ready to keelhaul the first man who laughed—but they all did in unison; I was outnumbered and licked.

We dumped my booty of fish into the lifeboat below, took up our oars and pulled back to the cutter. No, we did not have fish for chow that night—I made waffles and fudge!

Just at dusk the Mojave was outside Boston harbor with her salvaged trawler, the Boston College, where a tugboat took her in tow, and we went back to sea.

these very things that most often produce failure in the kitchen. Combine this lack of knowledge with careless measurements and a success is to be regarded as unusual instead of the rule. Miss Burroughs leaves nothing to chance or the possible knowledge of her pupil.

Over and over she says—if one cook can do it, another can. If a dish can be made perfect one time it can be made perfect every time. In her demonstrations she takes her audience along step by step. She starts with the selection of raw materials, she points out the utensils to use, how to mix, the control of stove or refrigerator, the exact time required. There is scarce a dish but has from one to a dozen little touches of seeming unimportance and yet those little things are the very things that spell success. She doesn't say, "I hope this will turn out all right," as it is popped into the oven. She says with calm and perfect confidence, "When we take this out in 20 minutes it will be thoroughly baked and a tempting golden brown." It always is.

"There is no such thing as a natural born cook," is another contribution. "Not any more than there is a natural born chemist, or natural born brick-layer. Cooking isn't an instinct, it's a science. If some women have better luck than others, it is because she has keen eye for measurements, a methodical disposition and unconsciously follows a fixed routine. There are no good fairies hiding in the kitchen to help upset the laws of nature."

One of the interesting and amazing things of Miss Burroughs' course is the great variety of dishes she creates. In a few afternoons she swings through all the branches of cooking, meats, desserts, vegetables, soups, even sandwiches and salads and breakfast dishes. She seeks to give demonstration of "type" dishes, with basic recipes showing how a slight change of ingredients produces a whole host of new and apparently different dishes. The woman with a family with what she terms "appetites of woe," secures real information but so does the society woman who wants to entertain at bridge or the bachelor girl with a two burner plate.

She teaches a "hurry-up" method, what to prepare for the unexpected guest as well as how to prepare and serve a formal meal. And right along with this knowledge comes a practical course in home economics that means a lower grocery bill and an improved menu.

Nab Pair Accused of Swindling Many Persons

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 9.—Chief of Police James Welsh Friday nabbed a colored man, who said he is John Pierce, 243 North 136th street, New York City, on a charge of having attempted to swindle Mrs. F. M. Harris, colored, of Jackson street, this borough.

Chief Welsh and Abington policemen had set a trap to catch Pierce and his companion, said by Pierce to be William Johnson, of New York, but Pierce evidently became suspicious while waiting for Mrs. Harris outside a local bank and fled. Chief Welsh trailed him and arrested him as he was running up Pine street near Court early this morning.

Pierce and his "buddy" have been sought for several years for similar swindles, the Abington police say.

One woman is said to have been swindled out of $1060 at Willow Grove and two persons out of other sums.

As Mrs. Harris was waiting for a bus at Willow Grove yesterday, the two men pretended to find a purse containing $2800 near her. They opened the purse and she saw the money which appeared to be real.

Their proposition to her was that they would split the sum three ways if she would meet them in Doylestown this morning and put up $500 cash, which she said she had in bank, as "security" with their "boss."

Mrs. Harris pretended to fall for the scheme but after she left them hunted up Officer Noah Kirkley, of the Abington police, who revealed to her that the two men were criminals they had been seeking for several years for similar swindles.

Officer Kirkley got in touch with Chief of Police Welsh, accompanied by Officers Henry Gies and John Stanley of the Abington force, and arranged to stage a trap at a local bank this morning.

Mrs. Harris appeared as had been arranged and was given an envelope containing a fake bank roll, supposed to be the $500.

But Pierce, who had been outside the bank, seems to have become suspicious and ran about the time she left the bank. The chase and arrest soon followed.

Pierce said his buddy was to meet him at the post office, but later said he thought he was in Willow Grove. Officers went there to look for him.

The scheme, it appears, was to get the woman to put up $500 for which she was to receive $900—but she never would have gotten it, the officers say. In another case the colored men, who had white confederates, would say that one of them would go to see the "boss" while the victim and the other waited. After a while the other Negro would say: "I wonder what takes him so long?" and later would say: "I'll go see if I can find him. You wait here!" That would be the last the victim would see of them or her money.

Education Week

This week is being celebrated all over the United States as Education Week. The school officials are particularly interested in this event because each year sees new developments in the growth of education.

Due to the unemployment situation, many former pupils who left school because of economic necessity are now returning and swelling the ranks of the American student body. This puts an added significance on the term "Education" and places a greater responsibility on the schools.

We know that you are more interested in us during this week than during any other week in the year. Education is embodied in us. What will we do with it?

The results brought about by education in this country have been nothing short of miraculous. Even in Lincoln's time an education was practically unattainable. Now every child, rich and poor alike, has the same opportunity of securing at least a grammar school education. Education is doing more than anything else to abolish class distinction.

The advantages of education are too varied to enumerate. We do appreciate your efforts in our behalf. You are supplying us with a firm foundation for our future life structure. It is for us to shape these structures into permanent habitations—to build for eternity.

Armistice Day

On this November 11th, the thirteenth anniversary of the signing of the armistice which ended the World War, many of us are mentally surveying world events, and wondering—will there be another war like it?

To some of us, the events of that time are familiar merely by hearsay; to others who are older, the Armistice has a greater significance. Can we make it truly an Armistice, a cessation of hostilities, for years to come, or must the World War go down in history as "Just another war?"

The Play Committees

The practices for the school play, "Her Song," are progressing nicely under the leadership of Miss Grace Mackey, the director.

The following committees have been appointed: Talent, Miss Taylor, Miss Dolbow, Miss Garrigue, Miss Hewitt; finance, Mr. Shoemaker, Mr. Hertzler, Mr. Shank; student finance, David Spector, Helen Arnold, James Blanche, Dorothy Dugan, Kenneth Clifton; publicity, Miss Marple, Mr. Utz; student publicity, Leon Schiffer, Geneva Silvers, Miss Dolbow, Mr. Brown; student program, Franklin Pine, V. Galzerano, W. Warner, Betty Hill, Thelma Wallace, Ruth Pickering, Margaret Owens, Vivian Greene; stage property, Mr. Bird, Mrs. Culver, Miss Webber; students, Henry Streep, J. Hills.

Assembly

The boys and girls of Junior and Senior High School will miss their enjoyable half hour in assembly, due to the fact that this time will be used by the players in "Her Song" in which to practice their parts.

Many people have often wondered why we have assembly or chapel. We have it for many reasons. One is to promote friendly terms between boys and girls of different classes.

Assembly also provides a certain amount of recreation for the amusement of the pupils.

Monday and Thursday are the days for Senior High assembly and Tuesday and Wednesday for Junior High chapel. Friday is usually reserved for the joint assembly in which the Junior and Senior High School unite. Unfortunately we have not had joint assembly this year because of the crowded situation of our school, but we hope some plan may be devised so that we may have our usual joint assembly.

Book Reviews

After school on Friday afternoon the 8th grade group enjoyed a Halloween party. A few of the girls came masked. Games were played, and Lillian Rogers won the prize in the peanut race.

While the refreshments were being eaten, one of the party told a ghost story. At the end of an hour and a half the guests departed. The eighteen girls who were present enjoyed themselves.

The eighth grade classes are busy reading books at home. The books are taken from an approved list published by the State Department of Education. After reading the books, reviews are required of the work read. This unit of work must be completed in order to pass the English course. The students in the literature classes have been giving impromptu speeches. They have proved both interesting and amusing.

The Teacher

An old man teaching a lone highway
Came at the evening, cold and gray.
To a chasm, vast, and deep, and wide

The old man crossed in the twilight dim,
The swollen stream had no fears for him;
But he turned, when safe on the other side,
And built a bridge to span the tide.

"Old man," said a fellow-pilgrim near,
"You are wasting your time in building here,
You never again will pass this way."

Your journey will end with the closing day;
You have crossed the chasm, deep and wide,
Why build you this bridge at even-tide?"

The builder lifted his old gray head.
"Good friend, in the way I've come," he said,
"There followeth after me today
A youth, whose feet must pass this way."

This stream, that has been as naught to me,
To the fair-haired youth might a pitfall be;
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim;

Good friend, I am building this bridge for him."

Side Lights in The News of World Capitals

By Robert S. Allen
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—One of the greatest pieces of public sentiment mobilization since the war is being carried out by the United States Sesquicentennial Commission.

Every agency of public opinion is being utilized in its campaign to make the people of the country George Washington minded. Newspapers, magazines, text books, schools, plays, movies, photographs, sculpture, music, historians, teachers, even the President of the United States, have been pressed into this great movement.

A great wealth of publicity background is being built up on which to foundation the nine-months Washington sesquicentennial celebration that runs from February 22 to November 26, of next year. Old and young are being taught in countless ways the story of the Father of His Country his life, his times, his ideals and his significance.

The guiding genius of this great endeavor is Representative Sol Bloom, of New York. August and famous names fill the roll of the Commission, but Sol's is the driving force and industry. It was he who led the fight in Congress for the generous appropriation to finance the movement.

It was he who conceived the elaborate organization that takes up a full floor in one of Washington's newest and largest office buildings and from which daily pours out an unending flood of Washingtoniana.

It was Sol who got George M. Cohan to write official Sesquicentennial song and present it in a special binding to the President. It was Sol who sang it to Mr. Hoover, when George pleaded a hoarse throat.

And it was Sol, Indiana born son of German-Jewish parents, who rushed into the breach when too Anglo-conscious citizens protested against the portrayal of the Yorktown surrender spectacle.

"The British ambassador has been invited," they complained. "This will hurt British feelings and impair Anglo-American relations."

"Nonsense," Sol replied. "What was good enough for Washington is good enough for us."

It is all Sol's show and a gorgeous one. A visit to the Commission's offices is a sight not to be missed. Office after office filled with busy workers. And all enormously enthusiastic and fond of Sol.

They work hard and steadily, but Sol is no slave driver. He is modern in every sense of the word. Humane treatment of workers he believes means direct and concrete results in increased efficiency, loyalty, and industry. So Sol, alone of all government executives, has instituted the five-day week in his unique organization.

The experiment has attracted wide attention of government workers and may play an important role in the growing movement for a five-day week for all government employees.

Each office is a separate hive of propaganda activity. One is the radio division; another the pageant division turning out historic pageants for school and public use and available free of charge; a third is the movie division; the next the text book division, the costumes division, the photograph division, the poster division, the bust division, the magazine division, the press division, and so on.

The press division is one of the largest. Here in a large chamber men and women are hard at it preparing tracts on Washington, the farmer, the soldier, the statesman, the builder, the church-goer, the friend, the land-owner, the student, etc. The whole length of one of the walls is occupied with charts showing the results of this outpouring of press matter. The results are amazing, showing how thoroughly the country is being blanketed with the interesting stories.

One fourth of the entire floor is devoted to the mailing department. Here huge piles of matter are constantly being wheeled in and wheeled out to be mailed, under special congressional frank, to the four corners of the land.

Everything is free. Do you want a poster, text-books, pictures, plays, pageants, tracts, speech, just drop a line to Sol and it will come to you by return mail, gratis. It is all paid for out of the federal treasury.

Over it all Sol presides, busy, cheerful, full of ideas, and immensely enthusiastic. He takes no pay. He is a wealthy man. When the great mass of his congressional colleagues deserted the Capital during the Summer's distressing heat, Sol kept right on with his work. He says he never engaged in any endeavor he enjoyed more, or got greater satisfaction out of the doing.

Cold Weather Comfort

There's more "snap" in the air than there has been in a long time. Old Jack Frost is nipping things.

Cold weather is here — one cannot avoid it.

Winter is the most expensive season—it costs all of us more to live comfortably in winter than in any other season.

Therefore all of us must look carefully upon our expenses.

If we can get the necessary comforts and conveniences of life at less expense than previously, perhaps by making some change in our mode of life, then it is good judgment to make the change.

The most expensive luxury in the average man's household today is the family automobile.

No matter how cheap the car itself may be, it costs at least 10 cents a mile to operate it.

Anyone can figure it out.

Yet the buses and trolleys carry you wherever you wish to go at a fraction of the cost. They carry you more safely than you can travel in your own car.

The only difference between your private transportation system and the public one is that the public transportation vehicle operates on a schedule, while you can drive your automobile at any time—provided the tires are good, the battery is charged and the mechanical equipment is in good repair, which often is not the case.

So commonsense, good business judgment, demand that the sensible head of a family use the most economical means of transportation—the buses and trolleys, especially during the winter season, when the cost of private service leaps, and when the demands on the wage earners' purses are heaviest.

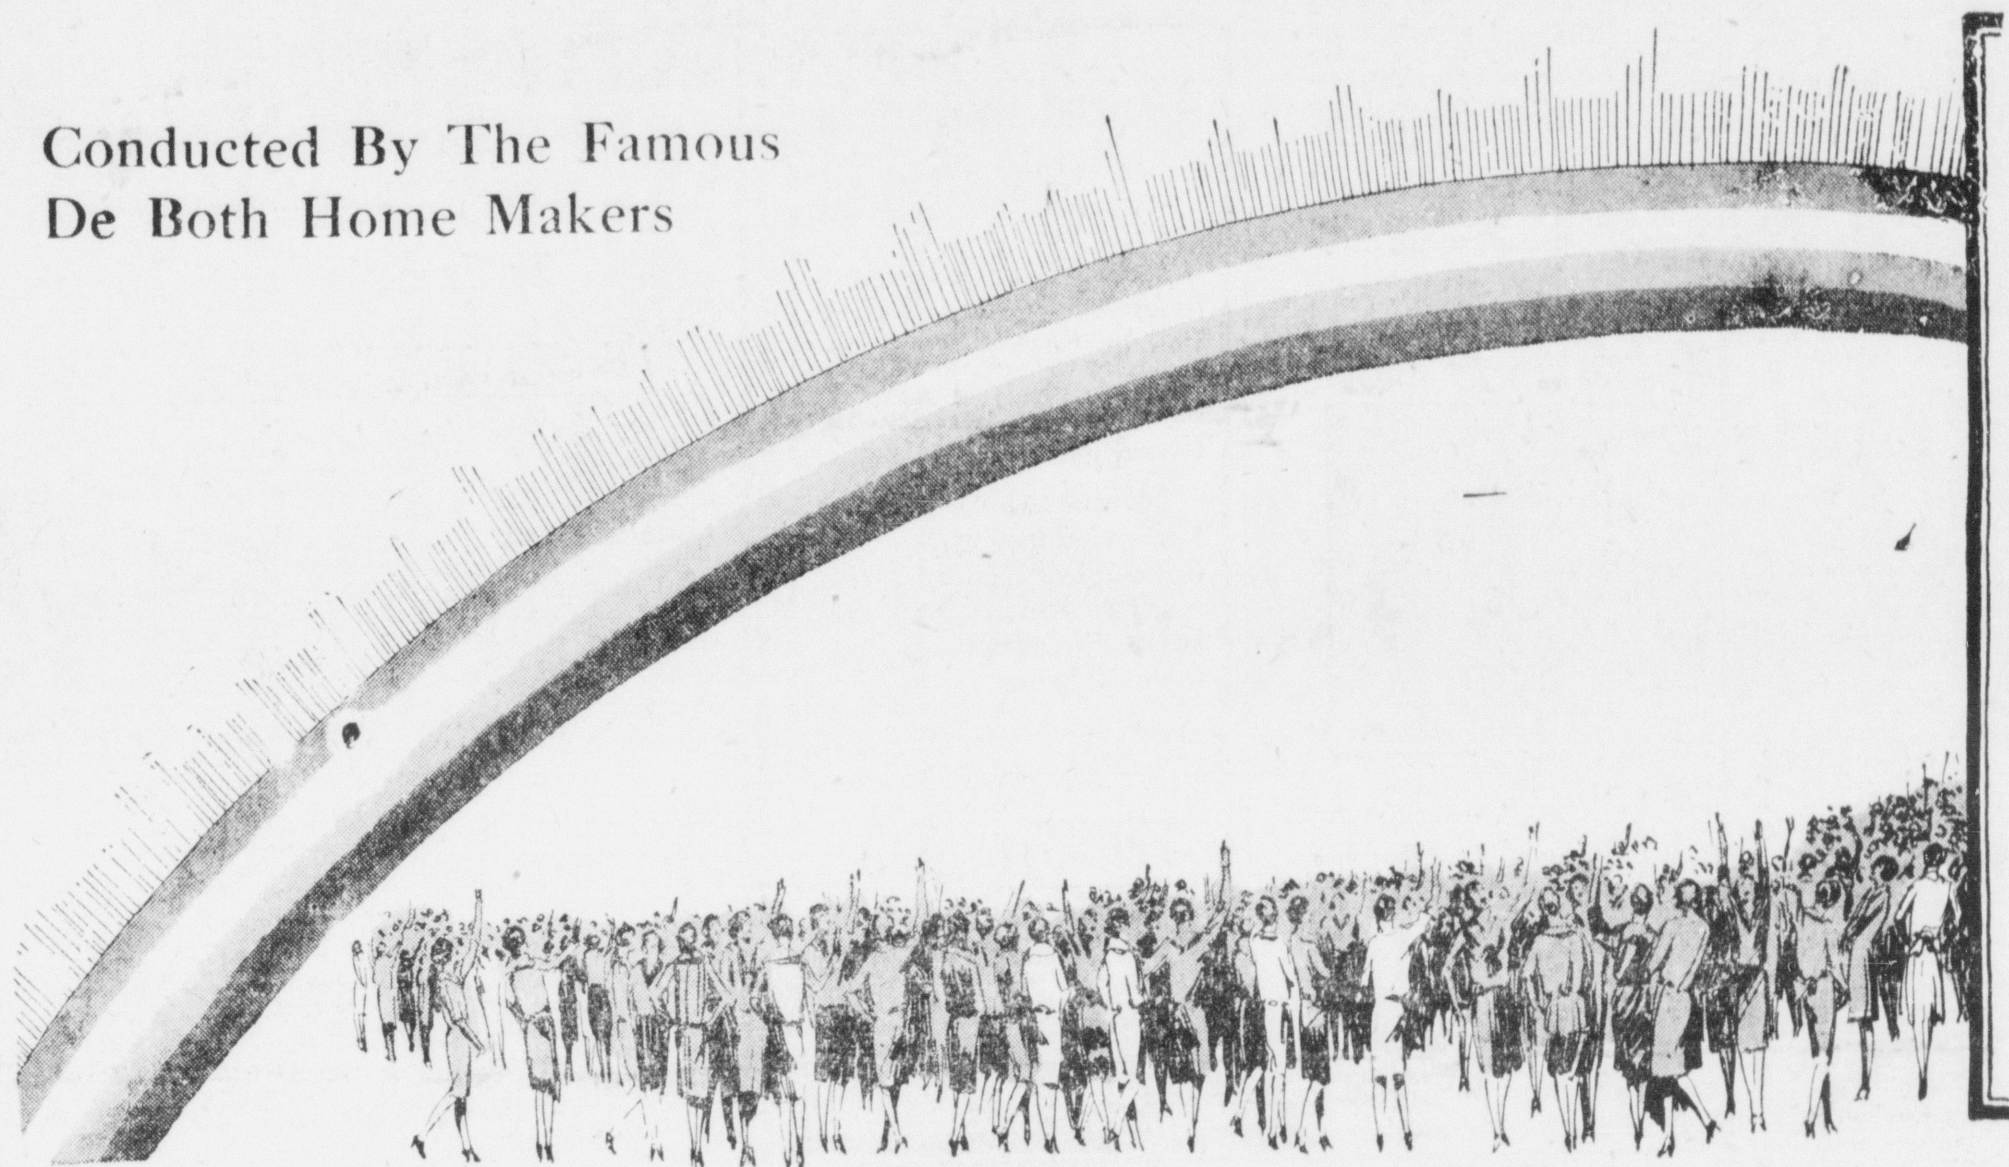

Use the buses and trolleys—it will pay you to do so.

SIX MONTHS REQUIRED LONG AGO FOR SHOPPING

In Washington's Time Folks
Ordered Winter Clothing
From England in May

SHOPPING LIST LONG

It took six months to do your fall shopping in the days of George Washington. If you wanted a new beaver hat and six pair of silk stockings you sent an order to Robert Cary and Co., in London, by the ship which left in May, and might plan on receiving it in October, providing all went well on the high seas.

Until about 1790, the shops had been hodge-podge and the wares meager, but about this time, the first brilliant retail fancy dry-goods shop in America was opened in Philadelphia, according to the United States George Washington-Bicentennial Commission, by a Mr. Whiteside from London, in true Bond Street style. It was at 134 Market street, and the uncommon size of the panes of glass, the fine mull and jaconet curtains, the chintzes and linens suspended in pieces or hanging festooned, the shopmen behind the counter, bowing and smiling, created for a time a sensation. "Oriental luxury itself, would not disdain the linen they wear," wrote an observer of the times.

During the period that Philadelphia was the seat of government, the arrival of the spring and fall ships from London brought a scene of great excitement and activity. On the pavements all along Front Street, from Arch to Walnut, boxes and bales of English dry-goods were scattered before the doors of importers. The clerks, apprentices and subordinates of the merchants were as busy as bees in their several vocations, some with sharp knives and claw-hammers, ripping and breaking open the packages and cases, and others within doors exhibiting the goods as salesmen, altogether displaying a pleasant bustle of rivalry and competition.

The retailers, principally women were hovering around, mingling with the men, and viewing with admiration the rich varieties of foreign chintzes, muslins, calicoes of the latest fashion.

All sums of money were computed in pounds, shillings, pence and farthings, dollars and cents were unused denominations except in the reports of Alexander Hamilton, Secretary of the Treasury.

In Colonial times, the invoices of orders from the great plantations of the south were of a prodigious length, as the needs were always manifold. In George Washington's own handwriting, may be seen in an aging and yellowed manuscript in the Congress-sional Library, a long list of things wanted from England for Mount Vernon, which included such articles as ladies' bonnets and shoes, horse scissors, 5 pounds of white sugar candy, 25 pounds best jar raisins, perfumed powder, 6 pounds at a time, medicines and herbs. It took forethought and painstaking planning to keep supplies on hand. Even then a purchaser might be doomed to disappointment, for the perils of the sea were very real in the 18th century. The waters were alive with pirates and privateers. Merchant vessels, of necessity, went fully armed to defend themselves against these maritime marauders, and the men-of-war of hostile nations.

A merchant of that time was a sea-captain as well, and his ship was his place of business. Small sailing vessels, many of which were unseaworthy, put into ports on the whim of the vessel's master, without attracting the attention which is given the movements of ships today with cable, wireless and radio.

The logs of the old merchant ships of Salem show that they sometimes proceeded without a definite schedule, their direction often being determined by the winds and the weather, or the news picked up from passing vessels.

The same trend in events which brought a handsome, well regulated shop to Philadelphia guided the course of events in Boston and New York, where shops soon took their part on the pretentious example set in the capital by Mr. Whiteside of London.

Before this, the shops everywhere in this country had been known by the signs over their doors. In Boston, for instance, every business street was an endless succession of golden balls, blue gloves, crowns and scepters, dogs and rainbows, elephants and horse-shoes. These also served as advertisements for the business, although at first they bore no relation to it. Within one found crimson velvets from Genoa, silks from China, linens from Ireland, rich damasks and cambrics from England, bonnets, garterings, vest patterns and figured silk cloaks.

In New York the first shops were along Dock street, and Queen street. Some of the earliest shop-keepers who dealt in European and India goods were the Beekmans.

The shop-owners and merchants of Salem, chief of which was the Derry family, took cargoes of fish to Cadiz and Malaga exchanging for oil, fruit, handkerchiefs, molasses, coffee and spices. In fact their fleet of ships sailed the Seven Seas.

The lesser towns scattered from Portsmouth to New London were thriving and populous. Their proximity to water made them great trading and fishing ports. But before the Revolution scarcely one could be found in a group of citizens, who had not some venture on the sea, either regular or irregular. Restrictions laid by the mother country on the commerce of her colonies led to smuggling which proved a sure road to wealth.

Prominent characters in every town while under British rule, had constantly stowed away in their cellars and attics, goods they would have been loathe to have the custom officers see. To these harbors came vessels built for speed and laden with contraband ware, gathered in the colonies of France and Spain. Boston was long the center of the smuggling trade. Following the Revolution, smuggling almost ceased.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 30.—

Gary Cooper's illness has upset plans for "The Miracle Man," but Paramount is slowly gathering the supporting players.

Robert Coogan, "Sooky" to you, has been cast as the crippled boy in the story.

This will be his first role other than the Percy Crosby character.

There seems to be some doubt as to whether Gary Cooper will play the role created by Thomas Meighan.

His physicians are advising a long rest from film work and the studio may not be able to hold up the picture.

Perhaps now they will persuade George Bancroft to play the confidence man. He was the original choice.

Sylvia Sydney is to have the Betty Compson part and Irving Pichel follows Lon Chaney.

CAUSE FOR COMPLAINT.

This telegram was received two days ago by the M. G. M. production department:

"I'm mortified. In fact I'm horses de combat. Here I goes away in the woods for three weeks practicing to play the role of Tarzan and what happens? You ups and gives the part to a guy called Johnny Weissmuller just because he can swim a little better than I do. I went and practiced so much I can now swing from limb to limb by my schnozzle. So what?"

"JIMMY DURANTE."

I HEARD TODAY.

Richard Dix is back and it turns out the honeymoon was spent on his ranch. He and his bride have known each other five years. "And thank God, she doesn't know a long shot from a closeup," says Rich. Janet Gaynor has returned from Palm Springs to resume work on her picture. She gained two pounds. . . . Rollo

Lloyd, who wrote the screen play of Ann Harding's new film, also is to have a part in it. . . . Hoot Gibson and Sally Eilers will take a place in Beverly Hills. The landlord refused to let them keep a dog in their Hollywood apartment. . . . Carrillo gave one of those bar-becues of his to "The Dove" company. . . . Fall is here. I saw Ivan Lebedeff wearing his white spats.

LET THE CAMERAS GRIND.

Here is a chance for the home movie fan. The American Cinematographer, official magazine of the Hollywood cameramen, will offer $1,000 in prizes for the best motion pictures made with a 16 millimeter camera. The contest opens November 1 and continues for a year. Only amateurs are eligible. Films will be judged on photography, composition, direction, acting, cutting and entertainment value. The first prize will be $500. Please don't write to this department for further details. They can be obtained from the American Cinematographer, Hollywood.

IN THE NEWS.

Those of you who have written for news of Myrna Kennedy,

Charlie Chaplin's discovery when he made "The Circus," will be glad to hear she is to play the feminine menace in Constance Bennett's new picture, "Lady with a Past." This is the first film work headed Myrna has done in some time. David Manners will play opposite Connie in "Lady with a Past."

GOAL OF RED CROSS IN FIVE COUNTIES 175,000

Heavy Demands Expected For Aid in All Section of the World

ASK ALL FOR SUPPORT

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—Rounding out a half century of magnificent service, with its greatest peace-time task of drought relief just coming to a successful close, the American Red Cross is preparing now for the Fifteenth Annual Roll Call which will open on Armistice Day, November 11, to continue until Thanksgiving.

The goal set by the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter in the Counties of Philadelphia, Bucks, Delaware, Montgomery, and Chester is 175,000 members. This appeal for a larger membership, made in the face of a substantial deficit, is sharpened by urgency by heavy demands upon all Red Cross departments of service as a result of unemployment.

In the five Counties the task of signing up members during the Fifteenth Annual Roll Call will be undertaken by thirteen thousand volunteer canvassers, the largest number working for a Red Cross membership enrollment since war days. Twenty-five hundred of these volunteers will be active in the four outlying Counties; in Philadelphia the house-to-house canvass in the city wards will be done by 7,500 women working under the direction of Mrs. Henry Brinton Cox, Chairman of the City Ward Committee.

The plan for enrolling members in the business industrial districts is unique. In more than 3,100 business offices there will be Red Cross appointees engaged in signing up their fellow workers. The executives of some 8,200 firms are being canvassed by special business men's Committees for higher forms of memberships costing $5.00, $10.00 and $25.00.

Colonel J. Franklin McFadden, Chairman of the Red Cross Chapter and head of the Membership Committee directing the Roll Call, states that the 175,000 members sought by the Red Cross are "less than one-fourth of the depositors in the cities saving banks, and too few in a population of two and one-half millions of people, where less than seven out of every hundred are now Red Cross members."

"Ninety per cent of these are annual members who pay only a dollar a year as dues," Colonel McFadden continued, "and while a large membership is the backbone of an organization founded on the principle of service to humanity, it is impossible to support any large chapter without a definite percentage of members paying higher dues."

Colonel McFadden stated that the budgeted Chapter expenditures are about $182,000, of which about one-third is for service to disabled war veterans and their families. The budget is exclusive of the fifty cents deducted from each membership and sent to Washington to meet national needs.

"The Roll Call is not a drive nor a campaign," Colonel McFadden explained, "but is the period when volunteer workers invite others to join or rejoin as members for the ensuing year. The special work of the Red Cross goes on from year to year. This includes Disaster Relief and the other Red Cross services—work for disabled veterans, nursing, Production, Braille or books for the blind, First Aid and Water Life Saving Instruction, and the Junior Red Cross."

"In every way it can, the Red Cross aids and co-operates in humanitarian work without duplication. In small communities where no other humanitarian organizations exist, the Red Cross acts in all directions as an agent of the community. It can be of more use to a community by increasing its membership under the Roll Call than by any other policy. The Red Cross must go on forever. This Chapter will have a substantial deficit at the end of 1931, and faces greater demands upon it for 1932 than any time since the World War."

Acting with Colonel McFadden upon the Membership Committee are Leonard T. Beale, John Fidler and Staunton B. Peck. The Honorary Committee for the Fifteenth Annual Roll Call includes Honorable Harry A. Mackey, Mayor of Philadelphia, General W. W. Atterbury, Dr. Charles E. Beury, His Eminence D. Cardinal Dougherty, Rabbi William H. Fishbein, The Right Reverend Francis M. Taitt, D. D., Reverend Alexander MacColl, D. D., Effingham B. Morris, Dr. Josiah H. Penniman, The Right Reverend E. G. Richardson, L. L. D., Edward T. Stotesbury, Samuel M. Vauclain and the Honorable Robert Von Moschizker.

Chairmen of the Fifteenth Annual Roll Call are now supervising activities in the various Red Cross branches in Bucks, Delaware, Montgomery and Chester Counties. They include the following:

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 30.—Discarding his bathing suit for a leopard's skin, Johnny Weissmuller, swimming star, will play Edgar Rice Burroughs' fabulous hero, Tarzan.

Johnny Weissmuller

After taking tests of every body but Bull Montana, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer finally has signed Johnny for the picture, with an option on more to come. Thus, the aquatic star cashes in on his recent nose-straightening operation. It will mark his debut as an actor, although he previously has appeared in several swimming shorts (no pun intended). Directing "Tarzan of the Apes" will be W. S. Van Dyke, the studio expert on out-of-door pictures. Leila Hyams is likely to play the girl.

THEIR FRIENDSHIP ENDED.
Al Boasberg tells about the producer of a Broadway flop who gave an out-of-town friend tickets to the show.
"The next day he met the friend on the street."
"Well, how did you like it?" he asked.
"Very well," said the friend, "only I don't think you ought to have had that brass rail around the audience."
"That wasn't the audience. That was the orchestra."

ALL THE GOSSIP THAT'S FIT TO COINTELL TODAY!
Donald Dillaway is ace-high again with Dorothy Jordan... Claudette Colbert has a shiny diamond bracelet and a bar pin to prove she isn't separated from Norman Foster... The Paul Porcasis have a new baby boy... Comes a letter from Dorothy Sebastian in Vancouver. She and Bill have been salmon fishing... Also a card from Al Santell mailed at a wayside point in Arizona. He says he's going East to investigate the depression... Esther Ralston is reducing in her own beauty shop. No profit there... Maurice Chevalier has Lilian Tashman's dressing room at Paramount... Maybe it's not news back East, but I hadn't heard until today about Gary Cooper's countess... Herman Mankiewicz claims to be the only man who ever resigned from being a supervisor. He says he can't afford any new enemies.

BRAVE EXPERIMENT.
And then there's the Hollywood scenarist who says he is buying a cellophane overcoat, so no one can touch him.

Maybe you don't care for puzzles, but I like to speculate on the couples at premieres.

Irene Dunne's party were her mother, Mr. and Mrs. William Le Baron, Myles Connolly and Leo Carrillo... Mary Brian with Ken Murray (where was Russell Gibson?)... Edna May Oliver and Franklin Pangborn... Mary Astor, making her first public appearance with her new husband, Dr. Thorpe... Nick Stuart alone (Sue Carol is in New York)... Richard Dix, again with the daughter of Senator Cole... Fay Garret alone (he says Fatsy Ruth will escape an operation after all)... Ann Harding and, of course, Harry Bannister... SELLERSVILLE-PERKASIE LOSES TO BRISTOL XI.

(By Leon Schiffer)

A powerful and invincible Cardinal and Gray juggernaut piloted by the diminutive, but clever, Raymond Pico, swept down from Bristol high school Saturday afternoon to down an undefeated Sellersville-Perkasie eleven upon the latter's field by the score of 18 to 0. Incidentally, this victory throws for a total loss the ever oncoming jinx which has been constantly dogging the heels of Coach Townsend's proteges for three consecutive games.

It was one year ago Saturday, that the besieged had handed Townsend's minions a 3 to 0 defeat. However, revenge is sweet.

Sellersville-Perkasie was conceded every chance of winning and was listed where betting went on as a 3 to 1 favorite.

No tribute can be paid to any special individual for Saturday's victory, since all praise must ultimately belong to the Bristol eleven which was a co-operating unit working in unison.

The invaders scored their first touchdown in the latter part of the second canto. Receiving possession of the ball on Sellersville-Perkasie's 45-yard line, the Bristol eleven quickly massed into their offensive formation. Bornice on a fake spinner eluded two Blue and White would-be tacklers straight-armed another and broke into the open. Running with the shiftness of a natural open field runner and with the angry braying of the half-mad horse ringing in his ears, the stellar half-miler reeled off yardage after yardage before being downed by Hoffmeister, the latter's safety man, on the besieged's one yard line, following a spectacular run of 44 yards. With the scent of blood in their nostrils and their mouths watering for the kill, the Cardinal and Gray eleven was not to be stopped. On the next play Pico scored on an off-tackle thrust, but only after he had shaken off several tacklers and had dove over the heads of three others. Britton failed to convert the extra point on a placement kick.

Determined to hold the lead at all costs, the second half saw Bristol lads conduct themselves accordingly. Knocking down passes, hurrying kicks, blocking and tackling, the invaders were in every scene of action throughout the third quarter. Although neither team scored, let it be said to the credit of the Cardinal and Gray boys that during this canto the crowd saw one of the most thrilling and exciting defensive battles ever staged in that part of the county.

The fourth stanza, however, was the "eye-opener" of the game. Receiving possession of the ball on the 50-yard line, Leighton kicked to Stover who was downed on his own 10 yard line.

With their backs to the wall the Blue and White's star punter, Stover, attempted to kick out of danger. Breaking through the Cardinal and Gray's flashing end, Esposito, threw himself headlong at the kicker, blocking the kick. Seeing the oval nestling quietly on Sellersville-Perkasie's 5 yard line, Britton, the invaders' stellar guard, scooped up the pigskin and stepped over the goal line for Bristol's second tally of the game. The try for the extra point failed.

Not satisfied with a twelve point lead and desiring another six-pointer, the Cardinal and Gray showed the besieged how an invincible eleven should conduct itself in taking advantage of the breaks.

Immediately gaining possession of the oval, following the aforementioned tally, on Sellersville-Perkasie's 40-yard line when Leighton recovered a grounded lateral from Hoffmeister to Gutthunst, the Cardinal and Gray eleven started a slashing, smashing offensive attack which completely routed their foe. With Pico, Leighton, and Bornice bearing the brunt of the attack the invaders started their long march down the field which terminated on Sellersville-Perkasie's 20-yard line. Receiving the benefit of a 15-yard penalty for the Blue and White's unnecessary roughness, the Cardinal and Gray were ushered into a position of scoring. Following a line buck by Pico for no gain, Bornice succeeded in wriggling over the goal for Bristol's third consecutive six-pointer of the game. The try for the extra point failed.

With the enemy completely routed and with only a few minutes to play, the Bristol mentor relieved his regulars for the rest of the game.

Next week the Cardinal and Gray eleven plays Springfield at home.

GREAT TEAMWORK ENDS IN ST. ANN'S VICTORY

MOUNT HOLLY, Nov. 9.—Displaying wonderful teamwork during the entire sixty minutes of playing, the St. Ann's eleven romped home with a 6-0 victory over the Mount Holly A. A. here yesterday.

Although only one six-pointer was counted the "Saints" missed several others, drawing penalties when the Holy goal line was reached. The home team could do nothing with the visitors and during the third and fourth quarter did not try any line plays or end runs but threw passes. But the St. Ann's aerial defense was equal to the occasion and not one pass was completed.

The only score of the game came in the second period. Working the ball up the gridiron from midfield, the three yard line of the Jersey team was reached. Here a five yard penalty was imposed on the Bristol team and then two line plays with Spadaccino carrying the ball and the score was made. A pass was attempted for the extra point but it was grounded.

"Socks" Seneca played brilliant ball on the defense for the St. Ann's team while "What-a-man" Sabatini did most of the ground-gaining on the offense.

The best home team did during the fray was a thirty-yard pass, Parker for Pope, who at one time played with the St. Ann's team. However, the Purple and Gold held at this stage of the game and they punted out of danger.

Ellis Parker, a quarterback of the losers, was injured in the third quarter and carried from the field.

Thump Market Picking Up

By HARDIN BURNLEY

IT is generally agreed that the Sharkey-Carnera thriller on Columbus Day night did much to rekindle fan interest in boxing. Although the American champion gave the Italian giant a dreadful beating during the last seven of their 15-round bout, it was a nerve-tangler throughout and helped prove two things: (1) Sharkey is a truly great ringman when not a mere freak; he can box, has extraordinary courage, remarkable stamina and may—if he learns to use his right for hard blows—become a champion in a year or two.

Sharkey's impressive exhibition—he gave one of the best victories of two-fisted, rapid-fire punching and head-working seen in many years—should force a return match with Champion Max Schmeling next Summer. Of course, the German's manager, Joe Jacobs, is quoted as saying that Mickey Walker will get the first shot on the strength of his strange draw with Sharkey last July, but few there are who think that even Mickey could have stuck through the shelling that Carnera took when Jack opened up with both guns.

Primo was slated to open up the Winter season at Madison Square Garden on Nov. 13 with Paulino Uzcudun in a 15-rounder, but the nester of the N. Y. Boxing Board—William A. Muldoon, octogenarian "Iron Duke"—banned that bout on the ground that it would be unsatisfactory because "Primo" is so big and the Basque comparatively so small. Last December Carnera decimated Paulino in 10 rounds at Barcelona Spain, in what was described as an interesting fight. But the "Iron Duke" evidently does not follow old Spanish customs or reports. An attempt was made to substitute Campolo or Tommy Loughran, and postpone the engagement for another month, but Carnera had planned to return to Italy for a visit and balked at what seemed like some sort of run-around. Unless feelings grow too bitter and "the works go in,"

Carnera will fight in the Garden some time next Winter.

It will be Primo's second showing in America's leading temple of swat. He made his American debut there early in 1930. Big Boy Peterson taking to the floor in less than a round. That was the start of the long and lucrative set-up tour which was hampered by the press to the point where the Ambling Alp was barred by most boxing commissions and even had to fight deportation. New York State was especially cold to Carnera and the Garden, ditto. But "Primo" proved to be the biggest drawing card in the ring and, it may be, or may not, be significant that the actual managerial powers who ran the Garden in those anti-Carnera days are now out and "Primo's" friend, "Jimmy" Johnston, is in.

The Garden hopes to have Sharkey in one of its Winter shows, probably against Tommy Loughran. Gone are the million dollar gates (Jack and Primo netted $107,000) but the thump market, considering the times, does seem to be picking up.
